Something has got to give tonight in the second leg semi-final of the Carabao Cup when Liverpool travel to North London to play Arsenal. After a 10-man Gunners scraped a 0-0 draw in the first encounter, the stage is set for a thrilling decider at the Emirates Stadium under the lights. Make sure you know how to watch an Arsenal vs Liverpool live stream wherever and what TV channel it's on by following our guide below.

The first leg highlighted the Gunners' new found grit under boss Mikel Arteta, with his side forced to sit deep for the majority of the match following Granit Xhaka's early red card.

Conversely, the match also served to show how much Jurgen Klopp's side are missing attacking duo Mohamed Salah and Sadio Mane, with the two out on international duty at the Africa Cup of Nations.

Both key men will once again be unavailable for the away side for this Covid-19 delayed last-four clash, which will give confidence to a home side looking to set up an all-London final with capital rivals Chelsea.

Arsenal host Liverpool this evening in the second-leg of their Carabao Cup semi-final.

Neither side were able to break the deadlock in the first outing at Anfield last Thursday.

Jurgen Klopp's side registered just one shot on target against 10-men Arsenal who were on the back foot after Granit Xhaka was shown a straight red card in the 24th minute.

Without key talisman Mohamed Salah again this evening, Liverpool will be hoping to find inspiration from elsewhere. They did beat Brentford 3-0 on Sunday.

The winner of the semi-final will face Chelsea, who beat Tottenham Hotspur 3-0 across the two legs.

Arsenal vs Liverpool team news

As already mentioned, Salah is not available as he is with Egypt and Sadio Mane is with Senegal at the Africa Cup of Nations.

Thiago Alcantara and Alex Oxlade-Chamberlain are doubts. Divock Origi has returned to training and could provide an added boost in the final third with attacking options limited for Liverpool.

For Arsenal, Thomas Partey, Mohamed Elneny and Nicolas Pepe are also in Cameroon competing at AFCON.

Xhaka is suspended after his red card in the first leg while Martin Odegaard is set to be available after recovering from COVID-19.

Emile Smith Rowe and Takehiro Tomiyasu are looking to pass late fitness tests. Bukayo Saka, Cedric Soares and Calum Chambers were still being assessed so are all doubts for the match.
